DEDICATION

KENNETH LANIER ANDERSON, AIA

Former Principal Architect of the Historic American Buildings Survey (HABS) and later Chief of the program, Kenneth Anderson served HABS for almost two decades with intense loyalty. Mr. Anderson was unique among the many talented architects associated with HABS throughout its sixty year history. None other has come close to developing the number of projects that Mr. Anderson did, nor has any other architect overseen the production of as many measured drawings deposited in the HABS collection in the Library of Congress. In remembrance of that loyalty and his wonderful sense of humor.

VIRGINIA DAIKER

For over forty years, from the inception of the Historic American Buildings Survey collections at the Library of Congress, Virginia Daiker provided guidance to thousands of researchers, scholars, students, and architects, first as a cataloger, later as a reference librarian and reading room head, and ultimately as a specialist in American architecture. Her knowledge of and devotion to the care and service of these collections, together with her calm and steady nature, are remembered warmly by all who were privileged to work with her. Her career spanned the renewal of interest in the nation's architectural heritage and the emergence and growth of the fields of architectural history and historic preservation. Miss Daiker and the collections which she made available at the Library of Congress were inseparable and indispensable resources for these developments. In remembrance of a lifetime of public service.

SALLY KRESS TOMPKINS

Former Deputy Chief of the Historic American Buildings Survey/Historic American Engineering Record (HABS/HAER) through the decade of the 1980s, Sally Kress Tompkins was primarily responsible for the preservation and revitalization of the HABS/HAER program during this period. Among her countless contributions, the reestablishment of the maritime recording program, dormant for almost forty years, stands out as one of her principal achievements. In remembrance of her many contributions to the program and the very engaging manner in which she pursued her work.

FOREWORD

In 1933, when the National Park Service, the American Institute of Architects, and the Library of Congress joined together to create the Historic American Buildings Survey, the nation was in the midst of its greatest economic crisis. Promising a “New Deal” Franklin Delano Roosevelt’s administration launched many public works programs to offer immediate relief to thousands of unemployed Americans. These efforts produced much of enduring value, including creative efforts as various as the Federal Writers’ Program, the Federal Theatre Project, and the Index of American Design. Of these programs begun in the 1930s, however, only the Historic American Buildings Survey continues today.

The Historic American Buildings Survey was the government’s first attempt to systematically record America’s built environment through graphic and written records. In the 1930’s and early 1940’s, the Survey put unemployed architects to work. Since the 1950’s, it has employed and provided “on-the-job” training for students of architecture, historians, photographers, and others in historic principles of design, construction, and technology. From the beginning it has provided a resource for writers, researchers, and scholars in many fields. Countless publications continue to draw upon its images and records, copies of which are widely available internationally.

The idea for such a survey originated with Charles E. Peterson, Chief of the Eastern Division of the Branch of Plans and Design in the National Park Service, who recognized the opportunity to employ jobless architects to record a vanishing architectural heritage. He seized upon the moment to convince his superior, Arthur E. Demaray, of the feasibility of such a program. Peterson enlisted the cooperation of the American Institute of Architects (AIA), through Edward C. Kemper, and the Library of Congress, with the help of Leicester B. Holland, who was Chief of the Library’s Fine Arts Division and Chairman of the AIA’s Committee on the Preservation of Historic Buildings. Besides securing initial funding, Peterson recruited the staff to produce the Survey’s original records. Meanwhile, Holland adapted an existing system at the Library of Congress to receive and organize these records for public use.

Work began in late 1933 under the direction of Thomas C. Vint, Chief of Design and Construction, National Park Service. In January 1934, a national advisory committee was convened by William Graves Perry, head of the firm noted for its architectural work at Colonial Williamsburg. The tripartite agreement among the National Park Service, the American Institute of Architects, and the Library of Congress became effective on July 23 of that same year. The Historic American Buildings Survey (HABS) has operated under that agreement ever since. The program received its legislative mandate through the Historic Sites, Buildings, and Antiquities Act of 1935.

In January 1969, the Historic American Engineering Record (HAER) was established by a tripartite agreement among the National Park Service, the American Society of Civil Engineers, and the Library of Congress. This agreement was later ratified by four other American engineering societies: the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the American Institute of Chemical Engineers, the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers, and the American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical, and Petroleum Engineers. All partners continue in a productive and unparalleled cooperative venture that includes both the public and the private sectors.

Reciting the history of HABS and HAER does not begin to introduce them adequately. They are, after all, the results of inspired visions brilliantly realized. Along with the Civil War and the Farm Security Administration photographs, they share the distinction of being among the most heavily used collections in the Prints and Photographs Division. They are in almost constant demand for a wide range of projects to include writing architectural and social histories, preserving historic buildings, and restoring private homes that are cherished by their occupants. Although HABS and HAER's documentation of structures has not been able to be systematic, it has encompassed an extraordinary range of building types and locations. Further, the collections have reached sufficient critical mass to make them a uniquely rich resource for studying America's built environment. They are all the more important because so many of the structures they document no longer exist, except as HABS/HAER measured drawings, photographs, and field notes.

In the preface to his book, Back of the Big House, John Michael Vlach rightfully praises the thoroughness and high standards of architectural documentation achieved by HABS and succinctly provides a stunning insight into the impact of this collection. These few sentences summarize what HABS and HAER have achieved and illustrate the high praise that they deserve:

"Look at the pictures. Pore over the drawings. Check their details. Do it carefully, and you can develop almost a tangible sense of the buildings..." (Preface xiii).

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people contributed to this publication. Robert J. Kapsch, Chief of the Historic American Buildings Survey/Historic American Engineering Record (HABS/HAER), and Stephen E. Ostrow, Chief, Prints and Photographs Division, Library of Congress, provided managerial support to this undertaking.

Georgette R. Wilson, Collections Management Administrator, HABS/HAER, wrote the section of the introduction entitled "Using the Checklist," provided consultation for the HABS/HAER computerized checklist data, assisted with the selection of photographs and drawings, and coordinated the overall publication effort for the Historic American Buildings Survey/Historic American Engineering Record.

Marilyn Ibach, Reference Specialist in the Prints and Photographs Division, Library of Congress, coordinated the contribution of the Prints and Photographs Division, wrote sections of the introduction, made the first selection of most of the illustrations, and provided illustration captions.

Other contributors to the checklist include the staff at the HABS/HAER offices at the National Park Service and the Prints and Photographs Division at the Library of Congress. HABS/HAER Deputy Chief John A. Burns directed the efforts of staff members Brian L. Cary, Paul D. Dolinsky, Alison K. Hoagland, Monica P. Murphy, and Georgette R. Wilson. From the National Park Service's Interagency Resources Division, computer specialist John Byrne provided technical expertise. Participants from the Library of Congress Prints and Photographs Division include Cristina Carbone, Sam Daniel, Marilyn Ibach, Mary M. Ison, Megan E. Keister, Greg Marcangelo, Elisabeth B. Parker, C. Ford Peatross, Bernard Reilly, and Helena Zinkham.

Participants from the Library's Cataloging Distribution Service include several staff members from the Product Development Unit and the Marketing Unit of the Customer Services Section and from the Computer Applications Section, all of whom assisted in the development, editing, and production of this publication. The cover design and all graphic preparation were done by Kimberly Lord, of the Library's Office Systems Services/Graphics Unit.

Without the contributions of these people, this book would not have been possible.

INTRODUCTION

by MARILYN IBACH and GEORGETTE R. WILSON

From the inception of the Historic American Buildings Survey (HABS) in 1933 and of its sister program the Historic American Engineering Record (HAER) in 1969, the guiding purpose for these two programs has been to document the nation's architectural, industrial, and technological legacy and to make the documentation easily accessible to a vast audience. Therefore, the Library of Congress and the National Park Service share a continuing interest in making available national catalogs of the two collections. The 1983 publication Historic America was the first to act as a catalog for both collections. America Preserved expands upon the 1983 checklist by adding 14,000 more structures, providing quantities for all formal documentation (measured drawings, photographs, pages of written historical and descriptive data, and pages of photo captions), including references to informal documentation contained in field records, and citing full shelflist numbers to facilitate the ordering of copies. Further, it indicates the presence of large format color transparencies that, although not accessible now, are scheduled to be transferred to the Library and made available in the future.

The HABS and HAER collections continue to grow daily, making the current checklist a snapshot in time generated from a computerized database as of March 31, 1994. Statistics for the HABS and HAER collections at the time of publication are as follows:

Number of structures:	30,097
Number of photographs:	160,517
Number of drawings:	96,242
Number of pages of written data:	15,464

USING THE CHECKLIST

The arrangement of the checklist entries follows the geographical organization used by the Library of Congress. A sample entry found on the inside covers of this book and at the end of this introduction illustrates this arrangement. The elements of the entry are labeled numerically in order of appearance.

1-3. State, County, and City or Nearest Vicinity

Elements 1 through 3 locate a site first by state, then by county, and then by city, town, or nearest vicinity. States and territories are listed alphabetically. Within each state or territory, counties, parishes and divisions are listed alphabetically. Independent cities are given the same status as counties and are listed alphabetically among them, followed by the word "CITY" in parentheses, for example, "Richmond (CITY)" or, independent cities within counties of the same name, such as "Baltimore (CITY)." If a rural structure is not in the vicinity of a city or town, it appears alphabetically at the beginning of the appropriate county listing.

4. Structure or Site Name (Record Name)

Element 4 in the sample entry shows the structure or site name, also referred to as the record name. After structures or sites are grouped geographically within state, county, and city, they are listed alphabetically by the structure's name, for instance, "Chesterfield Blacksmith Shop." Personal names that have become part of building names are listed by last name, first name, and descriptive building type, as in "Eddy, Zachariah, Law Office." Several special situations may occur with the structure, site, or record name. These include secondary names, the use of an address as structure or site name, historic districts, and complexes.

Secondary Names. When a structure has more than one name, each of the secondary or alternate names appears in parentheses following the main entry, for example, "Sterne, Augustus, House" followed by the secondary name "(Hoya Library)." Each secondary name is also listed in alphabetical sequence as a cross-reference entry that refers the reader back to the primary entry.

Address Used as Structure or Site Name. When the street address is listed as the structure or site name, it is alphabetized by the name of the street and is followed by the building type, for example, "301 Elm Street (House)," is listed under "Elm." A numerical street name is spelled out, as in "1919 Twenty-first Street (House)" and alphabetized under "T." A street address preceded by North, South, East, or West is alphabetized by that designation. A building in a rural location with no specific address is listed by the building type, for example, "Farm House."

Historic Districts. Historic districts are comprised of structures with separate addresses but united by a historic district designation or some other historic, geographic, or administrative link. Structures located within a historic district are listed in one of two ways: 1) for older surveys (up to December 1989) the structures are listed under the name of the historic district, followed by the name of the individual structure, for example, "Strand Historic District" followed by "Ufford, E.L., Building"; and 2) for recent surveys (since January 1990) the structure name is listed first, followed by the historic district designation, for example, "Worthman General Store" followed by the historic district designation "Old Town."

Complex. A complex represents small groupings of related buildings. The complex receives an overall HABS or HAER survey number and each structure within the complex also receives the overall HABS or HAER survey number with a designation of A, B, C, etc. For these entries, the complex name is listed first, followed by the individual structure name, for example, HAER OH-79-A is listed as "Wright-Patterson Air Force Base [complex name], Hangar No. 1 [structure name]."

5. Address

Element 5 in the sample entry shows the address, which follows the structure or site name. If the address is listed as the name of the structure, it is not repeated. A moved structure is identified with a parenthetical note following the address, stating that the structure was either "moved to" or "moved from" another address, with the town or vicinity name and the two-letter state abbreviation, for instance “103 Elm Street (moved from 600 Blacksmith Street, Binghamton, NY).” A moved structure is listed under the location at the time of recording by HABS or HAER. Structures moved across cities or counties are not cross-referenced but are listed twice, once under each location. A structure moved within a city, however, appears once, with the alternate street address following either “moved to” or “moved from.”

6. HABS or HAER Survey Number

Element 6 in the sample entry shows the HABS or HAER Survey number. This number identifies either the HABS or HAER program designation, the two-letter state abbreviation as used by the Postal Service, and the structure or site number representing the approximate numerical sequence in which the structure was recorded by HABS or HAER in that state, i.e., HAER [program] VA- [state] 103 [approximate sequence recorded]. For complexes, an identifier of A, B, C, etc., is given for structures associated with the overall record entry, for example, HABS TN-1033 (single structure) and HAER TN-1033-A (“A” indicating a complex). If a structure or site has been recorded by both HABS and HAER, the entry lists both survey numbers.

7. Library of Congress Shelflist Number

Element 7 in the sample entry shows the shelflist number printed in italics. This is the number used for ordering reproductions. The Library of Congress shelflist number groups HABS and HAER materials by geographic order and is important for locating documentation at the Library and on the microfiche. Following the imaginary example in this section, HABS RI,16-ASH,101-, the components of the shelflist number are:

- 1) the collection (HABS)
- 2) the state (RI, for Rhode Island)
- 3) the county (16- for Kramer, the sixteenth county alphabetized in Rhode Island)
- 4) the city (ASH, being the abbreviation for the town of Ashland)
- 5) 101- (the unique number assigned for the building within the town of Ashland).

If the number in this element is in a different form, it is an accession number, for example, 1993 (HAER): 119, and indicates that, as of March 1994, the records had not yet been processed and made available for public use.

8-13. Documentation

HABS/HAER records cited in this checklist include both formal and informal documentation. Formal documentation includes information recorded in standardized formats: measured drawings, photographs from large-format negatives, and data pages. Once processed into the collections at the Library of Congress, they are readily available for use. Informal documentation consists of non-standardized field records and other materials that are difficult to serve to researchers and are not readily available. However, in circumstances where the building is undergoing restoration or is the subject of advanced scholarly research, the scholar or restorer may want to apply to the Prints and Photographs Division to view field records, which can normally be made available with advance notice and an appointment.

Formal Documentation. Measured drawings are produced from recorded, accurate measurements. The drawings are in ink or graphite and are on translucent and archivally stable materials, such as mylar. They are produced in three standard sizes: 19 x 24 inches, 24 x 36 inches, and 33 x 44 inches. Black-and-white photographic contact prints are made from 4 x 5 inch, 5 x 7 inch, or 8 x 10 inch large format negatives. Large format negatives permit maximum enlargement without reduction of the sharpness of the image; large format cameras permit photography of tall or wide structures without distortion, to increase depth of field, and to displace obstructions blocking the view of the structure being photographed. In some cases, photographs are reference copies of photogrammetric images, commonly one plate of a stereopair, the original of which can be plotted for measured drawings.

Written documentation includes pages of written historical and descriptive data (referred to as “pages of text” in the footers within the checklist) and pages of photo captions that identify the photographs. The historical and descriptive data are based on primary sources to the greatest extent possible and generally specify the name of the researcher, date of research, sources, and limitations of the project. Photo caption pages cite the name of the photographer, date(s) the photographs were taken, and captions for each photograph. In some cases, they also cite the quantities of other documentation for a particular structure. All data pages are on 8-1/2 x 11 inch or 8 x 10-1/2 inch archival bond paper.

Large format color transparencies are cataloged in this checklist for the first time. The color transparencies generally duplicate black-and-white large format photograph views of the same structure and are made when information can be added by the use of color. When incorporated into the collection, a color xerographic image will be placed with the other documentation for that structure to alert the reader to the presence of a color transparency; the original transparency will be placed in cold storage. While not yet available to researchers, their notation in the checklist reflects an accurate picture of HABS/HAER documentation to date and indicates future availability.

Informal Documentation. Field records are considered informal documentation because they do not meet one or more HABS/HAER standards (content, quality, materials, or presentation). Field records from the 1930's usually consist of measured sketches of plans, elevations, sections, or details on graph paper in bound notebooks. Later field records can be diverse; they might include 35mm black-and-white negatives, contact sheets of field photographs, preliminary sketches of measured drawings, oversize blueprints with written notations and measurements, photographs from outside sources, or written material. Photogrammetric glass plate negatives are also considered informal documentation. Reference prints and copy film negatives for the most informative plates are incorporated into the formal HABS/HAER documentation, but the glass photogrammetric plates themselves are too fragile to be routinely served.

In elements 8 through 13 in the sample entry, symbols are used to designate the different types of documentation as follows:

- dr = measured drawings
- ph = large format photographs (black and white)
- pg = pages of written data or text
- pc = photo caption pages for photographs
- ct = large format color transparencies
- fr = field records

The number in front of a symbol indicates the quantity of that type of documentation. The symbol “fr” indicates the presence of field records but not the quantity. The absence of a symbol indicates that documentation of that type currently does not exist.

14-15. Location

Elements 14 and 15 in the sample entry show the location of the documentation, which is either the Library of Congress (L) or the HABS/HAER Washington office (H). In some instances, documentation can be at both places. This occurs when additional information has been recorded by HABS/HAER at a later date but has not yet been transmitted to the Library of Congress. When the location code appears as “L,” even with an “H,” please contact the Library of Congress, Prints and Photographs Division to determine what material is available. When the location code appears as “H” alone, the documentation is at the HABS/HAER Washington office and is considered work-in-progress, not available to the public until transmitted to the Library of Congress.

USING THE COLLECTIONS AT THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

The HABS and HAER collections are housed in the Prints and Photographs Division Reading Room of the Library of Congress. Researchers are welcome to visit the collections at that site and examine the records and finding aids in person. Space is limited and advance appointments are encouraged. General information about the Reading Room’s hours and rules is available by telephone or letter.

Readers will find the HABS and HAER collections in ring binders in open stacks in the Reading Room, retrievable by shelflist number and arranged in geographic hierarchical order: state, county, city or vicinity, and by the sequence in which the building was recorded within the given city or vicinity. The order for the material for each structure in the ring binder is: 1) captioned black-and-white photographs (some later photographs are preceded by a photo caption page); 2) written historical and descriptive data; 3) reduced-size copies of measured drawings (8-1/2 x 11 inches).

Photographic negatives and original full-size measured drawings are filed separately.

The geographic arrangement of the HABS and HAER collections is reflected in the shelflist number assigned to each structure, as described above. This arrangement serves readers well, as it enables them to easily find records for areas of the country, for individual states, for portions of states, or for individual structures. In many cases the card catalog need not even be consulted. For example, if a reader wishes to examine records of domestic architecture in the "Eastern Shore" area of Virginia and Maryland, he or she can determine the counties which make up this area, look up the numbers for each county, retrieve the notebooks for all the materials in those numbers, and easily browse the records to find appropriate material.

A master card catalog, which also follows the hierarchical geographic arrangement, provides an entry for each structure or site and lists the amount of documentation and applicable call numbers. Several card indexes, all in progress, have been developed to supplement the geographic catalog. The largest index is by subject, which includes types of buildings (such as barns), specific materials (such as stone buildings), and details (such as murals). The subject index also includes building styles ranging from Federal to International. A smaller index lists structures chronologically. Another card index includes the names of architects, engineers, or firms, allowing a reader interested in the work of a particular architect or engineer to determine which works by that architect are included in HABS/HAER.

A vertical file provides additional subject access. This file contains duplicates of the reduced-size measured drawings, as well as miscellaneous lists, pamphlets, and photographs arranged in folders by subject.

New material is added to the ring binders regularly. All records received through 1988 are available in the binders. Records received from 1989 to 1993 are scheduled for processing in 1994-96.

HOW TO ORDER REPRODUCTIONS

Copies of HABS/HAER formal records that have been transferred to the Library and made available for use can be ordered from the Library's Photoduplication Service. Such materials are noted by an "L" in the location field of the checklist and have an LC shelflist number in the shelflist number field, as noted above. Patrons may telephone or write the Photoduplication Service (at 202 707-5640 or the Photoduplication Service, Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. 20540-5230) for information on the reproduction services available and corresponding prices and use this information to choose the type of reproduction wanted and to calculate pricing. Orders, which must be prepaid, can then be placed directly with the Photoduplication Service. Patrons should send a written request to the Photoduplication Service, providing a copy of the checklist entry, citing the documentation wanted, and supplying a MasterCard or Visa credit card number or a check. The Photoduplication Service will make the copies and send them to the patron.

When the location field contains either an "H" or "L H," it is an indication that some or all of the records have not yet been transferred to the Library. When the entry does not have an LC shelflist number or has an accession number, as described above, the materials are likely to be unavailable. Also, as noted above, color transparencies are not yet available for use. Patrons are welcome to contact the Prints and Photographs Division reference staff for the status of a particular project and an accurate count of available records.

HABS/HAER PUBLICATIONS

America Preserved is the most recent book in a long history of HABS/HAER publications. The first published catalog of the HABS collection was issued in 1938, only five years after the Survey was created. Another complete catalog followed in 1941, and a supplement to that publication was published in 1959. After 1959, the size of the HABS collection necessitated publishing by state, rather than publishing one large catalog, and a program of publishing building lists by state and region was instituted. State catalogs for Alabama, California, the District of Columbia, Georgia, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, Texas, Utah, Virginia, and Wisconsin followed. The Historic American Engineering Record published its first catalog in 1976, only eight years after HAER was established, and a second in 1985. The 1983 publication Historic America: Buildings, Structures, and Sites was the first complete catalog of both the HABS and HAER collections. It included a checklist of both collections, accompanied by essays about the collections by authors from various fields. Intended to serve as a major guide for persons unable to visit the collections in Washington, D.C., and to place them in a larger historical context, the publication sold over 4,000 copies before going out-of-print in late 1991.

A complete list of HABS/HAER publications is found in Historic American Buildings Survey/ Historic American Engineering Record: An Annotated Bibliography, compiled by James C. Massey, Nancy B. Schwartz, and Shirley Maxwell (Washington, D.C.: U.S. Department of the Interior, 1992). This bibliography cites all HABS and HAER national and state catalogs and manuscripts, microforms and films, documentary publications by HABS/HAER and HABS/HAER cooperators, publications about the history and operations of HABS/HAER, recording specifications and instructions, official documents, and miscellaneous publications.

Three microfiche publications of the collections have been or are being published by Chadwyck-Healey, Ltd., 1101 King Street, Suite 380, Alexandria, Virginia 22314 (703 683-4890 or 800 752-0515). The first of these, The Historic American Buildings Survey, Part I, is a microfiche edition of 45,000 photographs and 35,000 pages of written histories in the Library's cataloged collections as of January 1979, describing 20,000 sites and structures. It is arranged geographically.

The Historic American Buildings Survey, Part II (1980-1988) is currently being published state-by-state and will include all drawings received from 1933 to 1988 and photographs and written records received from 1980-1988. The microfiche for the states of Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Mexico, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania,

South Carolina, Texas, and Virginia were available as of December 31, 1993. Significantly, the checklist America Preserved can be used as a finding aid for the documentation in the microfiche sets. The microfiche documentation was filmed in shelflist number order, so the checklist may be used to find the documentation on the microfiche.

Chadwyck-Healey also is currently publishing the microfiche Historic American Engineering Record state by state; this microfiche will include all drawings, photographs, and written records from 1969 to 1988. The same states available as of December 31, 1993, for HABS in Historic American Buildings Survey, Part II are also available for HAER.

As a preservation measure, the Library microfilmed all of the original HABS measured drawings in its collection in 1974, by state, on 63 reels (P&PLOT 12023). The order of the drawings within each state is not consistent by county or city name, and the microfilm should be viewed primarily as an inexpensive browsing tool. However, the Library's Photoduplication Service can make good quality xerox copies ("copyflo") from the microfilm and the resulting drawings can be arranged in file folders or notebooks as patrons desire.

These microform publications are available in many libraries throughout the country.

THE AUTOMATED INVENTORY (HABS/HAER Database)

An automated inventory, or database, of the HABS and HAER collections was established in 1982 by the National Park Service for administrative purposes, including indexing and statistical reports. This database is the basis for the checklist for America Preserved. Computer printouts of the database are used in the Prints and Photographs Division Reading Room for quick reference to the collection, and the Library can do some on-line searching. This searching, while limited, does provide access not available through existing catalogs and indexes. For example, a reader searching for mills in a particular state could request an automated search; the search will find all mills in the state if the primary name of the building includes the word "mill," as in "Swain's Mill." These searches must be requested in advance; "on-the-spot" automated searches are not yet available.

Checklist of Historic Buildings, Structures, and Sites

The arrangement of cities and towns within the checklist is alphabetical by county within each state. To determine in which county a city or town is located, consult the Index to County by City, which follows this checklist and which lists all cities and towns by state and indicates the county in which they are located.

Independent cities—those cities that are legally separate from any county—are identified by the word "(CITY)" following the city name. In the checklist, they are interfiled in the same alphabet as the counties. In the index independent cities are listed without reference to a county name.

This checklist was computer generated. Occasionally, inconsistencies in spelling, spacing, and punctuation may cause sorting irregularities. If you have difficulty in finding a site, please look to the beginning of the state or county in which the site is located, or look for irregular spellings of the site or city name. We regret any inconvenience these irregularities may cause.

GRAIN ELEVATOR OPERATION

1. GRAIN-FILLED WAGONS WERE FIRST WEIGHED ON A SCALE LOCATED BY THE OFFICE, THEN PULLED UP THE INCLINED RAMP TO THE DUMP SHED.
2. A HYDRAULIC RAM LOCATED UNDER THE FLOOR RAISED ONE END OF THE WAGON, DUMPING THE GRAIN THROUGH A GRATE INTO THE FUNNEL-SHAPED DUMP HOPPER BELOW.
3. A BOOT GATE CONTROLLED THE FLOW OF GRAIN FROM THE DUMP HOPPER INTO THE BOOT AT THE BOTTOM OF THE LEG.
4. FROM THE BOOT, THE GRAIN WAS ELEVATED TO THE HEAD WHERE CENTRIFUGAL FORCE AND GRAVITY FED IT INTO THE TURN HEAD.
5. THE TURN HEAD HAD A MOVABLE CAST IRON SPOUT THAT DIRECTED THE GRAIN INTO CHUTES LEADING TO THE BINS, WHICH HAD A TOTAL CAPACITY OF 70,000 BUSHELS.
6. GATES AT THE BOTTOM OF THE BINS FED THE GRAIN BY GRAVITY INTO CHUTES TO LOAD THE CANAL BOATS. RAILROAD CARS HAD TO BE LOADED BY ELEVATING THE GRAIN A SECOND TIME TO A CHUTE LEADING DIRECTLY TO THE RAILROAD SIDING.

THE LEG

THE LEG EXTENDS FROM FOUNDATION LEVEL TO THE HEADHOUSE LOFT AND IS THE DEVICE THAT ACTUALLY ELEVATES THE GRAIN. THE LEG CONSISTS OF A CONTINUOUS RUBBERIZED BELT WITH 12" X 6" BUCKETS ON 14" CENTERS ON AN 18" PULLEY IN THE BOOT AND A 36" PULLEY IN THE HEAD. THIS CONFIGURATION COULD ELEVATE 3,000 BUSHELS AN HOUR. THE CURRENT MACHINERY IN THE ELEVATOR DATES FROM M.J. HOGAN'S OWNERSHIP, AS MOST OF IT CAN BE IDENTIFIED IN AN 1898 CATALOG OF THE WELLER MANUFACTURING CO. OF CHICAGO. THE ORIGINAL STEAM POWER HAS BEEN REPLACED BY ELECTRIC MOTORS. NO OTHER MACHINERY SURVIVES.
